GENEALOGY

SPARROW FAMILY

1632

1623-1871

The following record of the descendants of Richard Sparrow was the result of the endeavors made by Miss Sarah Sparrow to collect such dates and material that would be of use and interest to any of the coming generations who cared to know their line of descent from their English ancestor, Richard Sparrow. Living the greater part of her life at the old homestead, in Orleans, she had ample opportunity and recourse to the deeds and papers of several generations, giving, no doubt, quite a reliable and invaluable aid in collecting material for the record, which occupied considerable of her time during the latter years of her life.

J. H. D.

GENEALOGY.

RICHARD SPARROW.

RICHARD SPARROW, with Pandora his wife, came from England (supposed from county of Kent), in ship Ann, and landed at Plymouth, New England, from whence he went to Middleborough, where he resided until about 1650, when he came to Eastham, now Orleans, bringing with him his son Jonathan, an only child. In 1658 he was chosen to represent the town, as delegate to Plymouth, to consult about military affairs of the colony. He died at Eastham, Jan., 1660, and was buried, together with his wife and son Jonathan, in the oldest burying place, at what is now South Eastham, where is seen a stone bearing the name and age of his son. Beside the latter there are two graves, supposed to be those of the two wives of Capt. Jonathan. It is not known at what age Richard Sparrow died, as history does not tell.

His first residence was near the cemetery where he lies. In 1665, his widow sold the place to Rev. Thomas Crosby, and came to live with her son, at East Orleans (then Eastham). Richard Sparrow bequeathed at his death, all his lands and goods in Middleborough and Eastham, to his son Jonathan, and his eldest grandson, John. Thus proving he left no children in Middleborough; although the name is there, and seems to claim the same ancestry as the branch in Eastham. This is involved in some doubt, not yet clearly proved.

CAPT. JONATHAN SPARROW AND HIS CHILDREN.

CAPT. JONATHAN SPARROW, son of Richard Sparrow, was born in England, about 1631, died in Eastham, March 21, 1706. He was buried with his two wives, in the oldest burying place at South Eastham, where his stone is seen. He was married Oct. 20, 1654, to Rebecca, daughter of Capt. Edward Bangs. Their children were: Rebecca, born Oct. 30, 1655, who married Dea. Thomas Freeman, of Brewster; John, born Nov. 2, 1656, who married in 1683, Aphia Tracy; Priscilla, born Feb. 13, 1658; Mary, born March 5, 1659; Aphia, born in 1660, died young.

He married about 1662 for a second wife, Hannah, second daughter of Gov. Thomas Prince. Their children were two sons: Jonathan, born July 3, 1665; Richard, born March 17, 1669; it is supposed also a daughter, Elizabeth, who married Samuel Freeman, of Eastham, in 1689. From Richard, our branch of the family descended, the others from John and Jonathan, 2d.

In 1689, Capt. Jonathan Sparrow married for his third wife, Sarah Cobb, of Barnstable, who survived him. He seems to have been an active business man, and filled various offices in Church and State. He was a military captain in King Philip's War, and afterwards eighteen years Governor's Assistant, a reader in the Church many years, etc. He left at his death the homestead-farm to his youngest son, Richard, and, as is supposed, settled his son John at the southeast part of Porchet, near Sparrow's Flat, and his son Jonathan at South Orleans, where many of his descendants now live.

RICHARD SPARROW, 2D, AND HIS CHILDREN.

RICHARD SPARROW, 2d, born at Eastham, 1669, married Mercy Young (or Cobb), date unknown, died at Eastham, 1727, aged 58 years. He had one son, Richard, 3d, and seven daughters, who married as follows: Sarah, who married Edmund Freeman, grandfather of the late Dea. Abner Freeman; Hannah, who married Josiah Cook, and removed to Chatham, Conn.; Elizabeth, who married Elisha Doane, and settled in Eastham (now Orleans); Mercy, who married Zebulon Young, of Eastham (now Orleans); Rebecca, who married Richard Mayo, of Eastham, descendant of Rev. John Mayo; Mary, who married Isaac Smith, and removed to Chatham, Conn.; Priscilla, who married Stephen Snow, grandfather of the late Dea. David Snow.

Many of the descendants of these daughters still reside in Orleans and Eastham, also in Connecticut, and several other states.

But little is known of the character or achievements of Richard Sparrow, 2d, who seems to have been of a feeble constitution. Tradition says that he was a root and herb doctor. He died at an earlier age than any of our male ancestors, and left the homestead to his son, Richard, 3d. He paid legacies to his sisters, and went to Connecticut, to see those who lived there.

LIEUT. RICHARD SPARROW, 3D, AND HIS CHILDREN.

LIEUT. RICHARD SPARROW, 3d, born at Eastham, 1702, married in 1724 Hannah Shaw (supposed of Middleborough), and died at Eastham, 1774, aged 72 years. His wife died in 1780. They had but three children who reached manhood and womanhood. Isaac, the only son, born 1725, married Rebecca Knowles of Eastham, whose father, Joshua Knowles, occupied the place once owned and occupied by Gov. Prince and family; Rebecca, born Jan. 26, 1726, married Joshua Hopkins, who was the father of the late Capt. Curtis Hopkins; Hannah, born 1737, married Daniel Hamilton; her posterity removed to Western Massachusetts, where they now reside; one of them, Paul Hamilton, afterward visited Orleans, and was the first Methodist preacher heard there.

Very little is known of the life and character of Lieut. Richard Sparrow.

The Rev. Samuel Osborn was settled in 1718 in the South Parish of the town of Eastham, now Orleans, the town being divided into two parishes, instead of one, as before, and agreed to build two meeting-houses for the greater convenience of its inhabitants.
